Bar in America

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—Although General Emilio Aguinaldo fought bitterly against the United States as leader of the Philippines insurrection until beaten and trapped by the American forces under General Frederick Funston, that bitterness has disappeared, as evidenced by the recent arrival of his son Emilio Jr., in this country to study for the bar. Emilio Jr., who is but 16, remembers nothing of the insurrection of course, but he brought with him renewed assurances of the friendliness of his father for America.

Young Aguinaldo is pursuing his studies in Boston. Upon graduation he expects to return to the Philippines to take his place as one of the legal lights there. Like his father he disdains notoriety, but despite his avoidance of interviews, he is well liked as a clear cut, manly youth.

NAVY SCORED
BIG SUCCESS
WITH AIRCRAFT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Success of the navy in solving its war time aircraft problems is attributed to the policy consistently followed of making this work conform to regular naval practice. Read Admiral David W. Taylor, chief constructor, in his annual report made public today, says aircraft production has been handled like other departmental technical questions, and despite the great expansion of forces necessary, "direction and control of aircraft questions have been cared for by officers familiar with the methods of the navy department."

"Civilians," Admiral Taylor continues, "have thus been able to carry on their naval work under the most favorable conditions. This policy has demonstrated its soundness. The types of aircraft developed for production have proved successful, changes have been a minimum and have been adopted only with a view to improvement."

As the report was prepared prior to the cessation of hostilities, it does not go into detail on any part of the building operations of the navy. As to aircraft however, it shows that both types of seaplanes used by the navy are "fundamentally American" improved in design on British experience. In October production of the two main types was in excess of requirements.

Development of balloons for naval purposes also came under Admiral Taylor's bureau. His report shows that much experimental work was done with types of parachutes, an officer of the construction corps having dropped from an airship in flight and from a kite balloon to test the design adopted. The same officer also successfully carried the basket of the kite balloon and its occupants.

The original plans for the Naval Aircraft Factory at the Philadelphia yard called for 1,000 small machines annually, the report says. In January, 1918, however, the navy's requirements were suddenly expanded and the plant was converted into an assembling center with four times that capacity. The original program maximum was reached last March and the expansion work has now also been completed.

Admiral Taylor gives no details as to the ship construction. As to the destroyer program, his most significant statement is that the government owned plant at Squantum, Mass., is to be continued as a permanent adjunct of the navy.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—Rapid motions over a printers case are the means of communication employed between a worker in the Times shop here, and his fellows. He is deaf and dumb.

Usually, when one not knowing the finger alphabets wants to communicate with a deaf mute, he must write his thoughts on a pad and get a response in the same way. In the Times shop, however, when the other printers want to communicate with their deaf mate, they simply pull out a case, indicate the letters by quick, stabbing motions of the hand toward the various boxes, and save two thirds of the time that would otherwise be required. They have been at it for twenty years or more, as the deaf printer has been that long on the same position.

Printers Talk With Mute by Indicating Letters on Type Case

SEATTLE, Washington, Dec. 11.—One of the big problems of after-the-war reconstructionists in the state of Washington will be the rebuilding of the salmon industry, according to State Fish Commissioner L. H. Darwin.

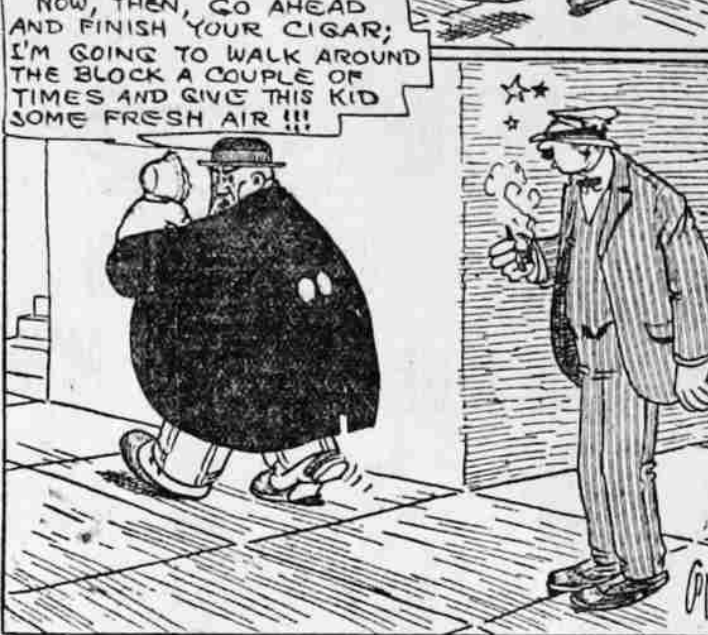

Mr. Darwin pointed out the other day that the demands of war had constituted a serious drain upon the salmon supply of these waters, and that new fishing laws would be necessary to prevent intensive fishing for a time.

Among the laws he will propose to the state legislature, he announced recently, was one forbidding aliens and alien corporations from holding fishing rights in Washington.

JOINT CONFERENCE OF LEAGUES. NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The National Baseball league went on record here today favoring a joint conference with the American league to discuss problems which confront the game with the return to peace conditions. A telegram to this effect was sent to each of the American league owners and to President Ben Johnson, at Chicago.

THE OUTBURST OF EVERETT TRUE

A printers' case, for the uninitiated, is a tray, divided into small boxes, and in each box type representing one letter or figure is to be found. Consequently, an experienced printer can read rapid motions over the case just as the average man reads written characters.

GOOD FOOD FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

At the request of the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy the Department of Agriculture has participated in protecting American military and naval forces against unwholesome food, says the Secretary of Agriculture in his annual report. The Federal meat inspection, which for years has safeguarded the civil population of the United States from bad meat in interstate commerce, was extended to include the special supervision of the meat supply of the American army and navy. The examination, selection, and handling of meats and fats are in expert hands from the time the live animals are driven to slaughter until the finished product is delivered in good condition to the mess cooks. Inspectors assigned to the various cantonments, training camps, forts, posts, and other places in the United States where large numbers of troops are assembled and at the close of the fiscal year there were 69 of such experts with the army and 30 with the navy.
